

I can hardly find words to tell you how concerned I am about Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary only days before the election. This seems to me to be a gross misuse of public airways that Sinclair uses free of charge. They are obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
